

Engaging in discourse and action to further Global Citizenship

You are a global citizen because you are a sentient being who is interdependent with every other being on the planet. So you know that none of us will live in compliance with the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) until all of us do because we are “tied in a single garment of destiny.”

You are a global citizen because you belong to a common humanity, to a broader world community, and you want political, economic, social, and environmental policies to reflect our interconnectedness.

You are a global citizen because you are aware that Global Citizenship is a consciousness that informs what you choose, how you act and what you do, including work, education, production, consumption and civic engagement.

You are a global citizen because you want to nurture the roots of peace while uprooting the seeds of conflict. When given a choice, you opt to create a more peaceful, humane and just society that respects all beings and natural resources.

You are a global citizen because you feel obliged to treat everyone the way you want to be treated. You care about giving voice to the voiceless.

You are a global citizen because you recognize the need for new social & economic architecture, including new structures, new beliefs, and new commitments that honor the inalienable right for every person to live with dignity, happiness, wellbeing, justice and freedom.

You are a global citizen because you recognize an emerging global shift in worldviews toward a common good centered, values-driven paradigm.

The Coalition for Global Citizenship believes that it is essential that governments, civil society, regional and sub-regional organizations, UN entities, international financial institutions and the private sector all work from a basis of values of just and fair treatment, inclusion and cooperation. CGC2030 is dedicated to a world in which human dignity and the fulfillment of our basic human rights are assured.
